

Press Report

The 7 days training programme on “Empowering tribal women by scientific rearing of livestock in integrated system of farming for livelihood improvement” organized by Animal Health Division was inaugurated by Dr S.V. Ngachan, Director, ICAR Research Complex for NEH Region, Umiam, Meghalaya.

Twenty tribal women from different places of nearby villages attended the training programme. The director highlight the concept of family farming and emphasized the role and active participation of women in rearing of livestock in integrated system of farming for high returns with less investment. The training will comprise of theory and practical session for hands on training in livestock farm of cattle, pig, goat, rabbit, fish and poultry. A training manual titled “Care and Management of Livestock including Poultry” was also released on the occasion.